

LETTER OF RECOMMENDATION

To whom it may concern,

It has been more than three years now that I have known Mr. Shivam Joshi as his professor and a mentor, and I have always found him to be an extremely hardworking, diligent, and enterprising student as well as a human being. I have had the opportunity to teach some essential subjects to his curriculum during his pursuit of a Bachelor in Commerce (Banking and Insurance) from VES College of Arts, science, and commerce, India, and I can attest to the fact that his perseverance and dedication to the field puts him in complete sync to pursue the course of MPS in Management from Cornell University.

As a student, I have seen Shivam as a fast learner and active participant in all activities, not just in the subjects of Business Law, Corporate & Securities Law, and Business Communication, which I taught. His dedication and inspired will to grow as a student and a person have also reflected in the A grade that he has been able to secure in all the subjects I have taught.

I have had a chance of close interaction with Shivam and have a glimpse of his accountability during a number of his projects, including the "History of Royal Enfield" and "Emergence of micro-enterprises problems and prospects," where I had mentored his team through concepts and research. His ability to understand the concepts well and apply the same to real-time problems and his dedication to any work he had taken up was always a striking feature of his personality.

Apart from the theoretical concepts, he had always been interactive, attentive, and punctual in all his classes going out of his way to solve the related problems in every activity and taking leadership in whatever way he could. Moreover, he had excellent skills in presenting his topics through clear communication and oratory capabilities that had always helped him strike out from the rest. He has always been active in aspects outside of his academic domain as well, always active in organizing various college events, managing the inter-collegiate festival named Euphony, and ensuring successful completion of the same. He was also able to ensure and undertake two important internships with M/s Utangale and Co. and Pipara & Co. LLP, owing to his strong networking skills and personal initiative. As a result, he has now garnered enough experience in the practical applications of the field as well.

It is my firm belief that the diligence and consistency with which Shivam has carried forward his laudable academic career so far stands testament to the fact that he could be a perfect fit to pursue the course of MPS in Management from the esteemed Cornell University and contribute to its existing glory.
